

EQUAL CHANCES FOR CAMPUS PARENTS

All of us are part of building bridges: between science and public, national and international places, free economy and science. Another to be established connection is the one between education and family. A bridge incorporating all demands.

Today's students are facing high requirements to achieve a good final examination result, stay mobile and flexible, gather experiences in foreign countries and at the same time practice an academic career compatible with the family.

The liaison of mobility and content family life is, however, an obstacle for students with children. Every individual has to overcome this challenge. To minimize the tensions concerning matters of mobility and to obtain a best possible equality of opportunities amongst students with or without family responsibilities it is time to act. Please be part of it.

“It is totally correct that even during the biggest stress of examination or during the time of research work one does not want to overlook a child’s laughter.”

Prof. Dr. Müller-Böling (CHE)

Students with children exemplify this slogan through their life style planning, alone. At the German Center for Higher Education Development (CHE) this opinion is also paramount. Building on this intention of wanting to improve the life style conditions of all members of higher education institutions the following competition was initiated jointly with the Robert Bosch Foundation and the German Ministry for Public Transport, Building and Urban Affairs: The Family in Higher Education Environments.

In conjunction with this program eight selected higher education institutions are collaborated in a best practice-Club. The objective is to become more family-friendly institutions and to develop practical offers. The general focus is on creating an atmosphere at higher education institutions that allows for study programs and training to be compatible with starting a family. In this way, regular meetings, lectures and on-site visits will generate additional value.

As a member of this club the Hochschule Wismar is taking a pioneer role und initiates the project “Check in – Foreign Studies with Child”. This project will far exceed the confines of the Hochschule Wismar and heartily invites all interested travelers and studying parents to join.
