

Editorial Team for the FQS Special Issue 01/2009

“Qualitative Research on Intercultural Communication”

Prof. Jens Allwood, [jens@ling.gu.se]

University of Göteborg, Dept. of Linguistics

Jens Allwood's research mainly comprises research in the areas of semantics and pragmatics. Mostly this research has been focussed on interaction in spoken language including psycholinguistic and sociolinguistic aspects. At present he is heading projects focussed on semantics for spoken language activity based communication analysis, cultural variation in communication and the visualization of complex information. He is editor in chief of the Journal of Intercultural Communication [online-journal <http://www.immi.se/intercultural/>]. His profile can be found at: <http://www.ling.gu.se/~jens/>

Dr. Assumpta Aneas [aaneas@ub.edu]

Universitat de Barcelona, Facultat de Pedagogia is research fellow and lecturer at the Department of Methods of Research of the Faculty of Education at the University of Barcelona (Spain). Several of her research projects and publications are dealing with the development of intercultural competence and the integration of the immigration. Her recent publications include: Competencia Global, edited by Diaz de Santos, the chapter Mohamed's Fall in the book “Counselling for International Transitions”, edited by P. Pedersen and N. Arthur for the American Counselling Association, and the chapter The Intercultural Competencies as confidence factor at virtual team works of the “Encyclopedia of HRIS: Challenges in e-HRM”.

Her profile can be found online at: <http://www.gredi.net/nuevaweb/equipo.htm#>

Prof. Dr. Dominic Busch [busch@euv-frankfurt-o.de]

European University Viadrina Frankfurt (Oder), Intercultural Communication is Junior Professor in Intercultural Communication at European University Viadrina Frankfurt (Oder), Germany. Before, he was teaching and doing research for seven years at the South East European Media Centre (SOEMZ) of European University Viadrina Frankfurt (Oder) and St. Kliment Ohridski University Sofia, Bulgaria. His main fields of interest and research include intercultural mediation, discourse analytic approaches to constructions of culture and interculturality as well as border research and employability of students from study programs on intercultural communication. His recent publications include Intercultural Mediation (Interkulturelle Mediation), Peter Lang Publishers) and Intercultural Competence and Employability (Interkulturelle Kompetenz und Employability), Special Edition of Interculture Journal). His profile can be found at: <http://www.kuwi.euv-frankfurt-o.de/intkom/>

Dr. David Hoffman [David.Hoffman@ktl.jyu.fi]

University of Jyväskylä, Institute for Educational Research is a researcher at the Institute of Educational Research at the University of Jyväskylä, Finland. His interests include international comparative higher education, international migration and ethnic relations and intercultural communication. Hoffman was the first program coordinator of the MA program in intercultural communication at the University of Jyväskylä and the EMICC Eurocampus intercultural communication program. Hoffman teaches research methods, higher education and intercultural communication in Finland, France and Canada; has published on higher education and intercultural communication and regularly presents his research in international venues, as well as by invitation from the European Science Foundation, Academy of Finland, professional associations, the Finnish Ministry of Education.

Dr. Matthias Otten [co-ordinator of the Special Issue] [otten@uni-landau.de]

University of Landau, Dept. of Intercultural Education is a sociologist and research fellow at the Department of Intercultural Education, University of Landau (Germany). He is coordinator of a specialised intercultural course programme within the Social Sciences at the University of Landau. Before coming to Landau, he worked with the Centre of Cultural and General Studies (ZAK) at the University of Karlsruhe for nine years (1998-2007). Several of his research projects and publications are dealing with intercultural communication, the development of intercultural competence, internationalisation in Higher Education and the nexus of migration and education. His recent publications include a two-volume book on Intercultural Competence (Interkulturelle Kompetenz im Wandel, IKO Verlag, edited with Alexander SCHEITZA and Andrea CNYRIM) for SIETAR - Society for Intercultural Education Training and Research. Currently he is also editing a special issue on "Interculturality in Higher Education" for the Journal "Intercultural Education" (with Terri KIM). His profile can be found at: <http://www.uni-landau.de/otten/>

Dr. Michele Schweisfurth [m.schweisfurth@bham.ac.uk]

University of Birmingham, Centre for International Education and Research is Director of the Centre for International Education and Research, and Reader in Comparative and International Education at the University of Birmingham, UK. She has over 20 years of experience of teaching and researching education in more than 10 countries. Her research interests include: the intercultural experiences of international students at UK universities; global citizenship education; democratic and child-centred learning; and education for development. Her recent publications include Comparative and International Education: an introduction to theory, method and practice (Routledge, with David Phillips) and 'Learning to Live Together: lessons on intercultural learning and educational and social change from a review of UNESCO's Associated Schools Project Network' (International Review of Education). Her staff profile can be found at http://www.education.bham.ac.uk/staff/schweisfurth_michele.shtml